Trekking in Nepal

The word "Himalaya" is Sanskrit for "abode of snow". This region has 8 of the 14 highest summits in the World that exceed an altitude of 8,000m, including Mt. Everest (8,848m). There are 3 different ways to enjoy the Himalayas: Take a mountain flight for splendid views of the snow capped Himalayas. Gaze at the panorama from popular mountain viewpoints such as Nagarkot and Dhulikhel, or trek. You can trek to the mountain base from where you start a choice of easy, intermediate and advanced treks through the mountains.

Trekking is possible at any time of the year depending on the route taken. The most popular seasons are spring (February – May) and autumn (September–November).

THE ANnapurna REGION

The Annapurna Circuit attracts a relatively high number of trekkers and include the Annapurna Circuit, the Kali Gandaki Gorge, The Annapurna Sanctuary Trek, the Jomsom Trek and The Muktinath Trek.

THE EVEREST REGION

Mt. Everest is the highest peak in the World and offers many different routes. Trek all the way up and back, trek one way and fly back, or fly in and fly out. A few popular treks include Kosi, Namche Bazaar and Phaplu.

LANGTANG REGION

The Langtang Region is situated directly north of Kathmandu. This region has three relatively short yet interesting treks: Langtang, Helambu and Gosainkund.
